

UKAS accreditation is recognised and accepted globally, reducing technical barriers to international trade.

Improved organisational efficiency

Accreditation can highlight gaps or weaknesses in operational capability, thereby providing the opportunity for improved organisational efficiency and outputs.

Competitive advantage

Accreditation provides independent assurance of technical competence; it can set you apart from the competition.

Accreditation supports the generation of new business, providing the potential to open up trade into new markets.

Survey results

of those that responded:

+ 93% agreed that accreditation provides confidence to their customers and stakeholders

+ 76% agreed that accreditation differentiates them from their competitors

+ 85% agreed that accreditation improves the quality and validity of their work

+ 71% agreed that accreditation helps them to win new or maintain existing business

Supply chain confidence

Accreditation can create confidence in industry supply chains and is often specified by public and private sector organisations as a prerequisite for acceptance.

UKAS accreditation provides confidence to employees, customers and stakeholders of a commitment to quality and service improvement

Manage risks

Accreditation can be an important factor in assessing, identifying and reducing risks.